

Relator

You enjoy close relationships with others. You find deep satisfaction in working hard with friends to achieve a goal. Your talent is valuable to organizations, groups, and individuals because you foster interpersonal relationships that lead to productivity.

General Academic Life

Create various lines of communication with friends in your classes, such as verbal, phone, and e-mail, and help each other when one of you has to miss a class.

Seek out advisors, counselors, and professors who demonstrate genuine interest in you as a person.

Seek out fellow students with whom you can play a mutual tutoring, learning assistance, and support role.

Study Techniques

Form study groups for midterms and exams with close friends.

Discuss class lectures with friends.

Study with friends who have goals similar to yours.

To increase your comprehension of reading materials, share what you have learned with friends.

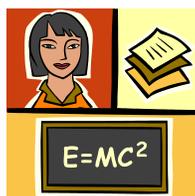

Relationships

Get to know professors who take an interest in you. Their involvement in your college experience will create a sense of belonging and stimulate your intellectual development as well as your academic achievement.

Share knowledge with others and build a support network.

Become a mentor and always have a mentor.

Develop a college lifestyle through which you share your academic progress and performance with people who care about you, both inside and outside the college environment.

Class Selection

Choose classes that friends are taking. Your relationships with them will heighten your engagement in the classes.

Do your best to meet the professors who teach the classes you are considering.

Select classes that encourage friendships and belonging.

Extracurricular Activities

Consider community and humanitarian work that you can rally your close friends to be a part of too.

Become involved in campus organizations that foster friendships.

Join organizations that your friends and you have agreed upon.

